examined the suitability of a chemometric partial least square pls regression algorithm towards building a robust model for objective prediction of chicken egg fertility for the brown eggs on considered incubation days 0 to 4 true positive rates tpr ranged from 95 65 to 100 and true negative rates tnr ranged from 88 10 to 93 57 white eggs on the other hand has true positive rates tpr ranging from 95 24 to 100 and true negative rates tnr ranging from 91 35 to 95 83 all results were obtained at selected threshold values of between 0 50 0 85 the results indicated that the adapted pls regression technique can discriminate between fertile and non fertile eggs prior to incubation and on different days of incubation the results were promising with the use of many pls components pcs but the use of fewer pcs shifted classification accuracies in favour of the prevalent class due to the imbalance data structure phenomenon it therefore became imperative to improve on the present implementation mode of pls for classification algorithm based on the present results the second study tested the appropriateness of a plsda feature selection algorithm for identifying informative features towards improving model performance for early chicken egg fertility classification with only a maximum number of 5 pcs considered classifier performance greatly improved with selected ratio features having tpr tnr and auc area under roc curve values in the range of 90 100 chicken egg fertility model structure was eventually successfully developed validated and verified using optimum number of 3 pcs understanding that the modelling approach used to identify informative variables might not be the best approach to translate the identified features into industrial practice 10 different classifier performances were compared and contrasted in the third study for adoptability potentials towards building an industrial online chicken egg fertility assessment system from the sensitivity specificity precision and f1 score values of 100 00 87 00 93 80 and 96 80 respectively for brown eggs and 100 00 71 40 87 80 and 93 50 respectively for white

eggs the k nearest neighbours knn classifier was adjudged preferable above its other counterparts the final study examined the performance of a synthetic minority oversampling technique smote algorithm on a larger industrial scale 10 000 chicken egg fertility data set knn classifier already presented as optimal among other classifiers was used for discrimination and performance evaluated from sensitivity sen 92 10 specificity spe 80 50 precision ppv 99 10 auc 91 70 and overall accuracy ova 91 60 our latest results based on the considered evaluation criteria were comparable with previous results showing reproducibility potential of our methodology chicken tricks he is very good at tricking goosey loosey and ducky lucky out of their food but what happens when he comes across the hungry fox hopscotch twisty tales combine carefully controlled text levels and word counts with highly entertaining and original stories perfect for children 5 7 year olds starting to read independently to meet growing demand the fao has estimated that world poultry production needs to grow by 2 3 per year to 2030 much of the increase in output already achieved has been as a result of improvements in commercial breeds combined with rearing in more intensive production systems however more intensive systems and complex supply chains have increased the risk of rapid transmission of animal diseases and zoonoses consumer expectations of sensory and nutritional quality have never been higher at the same time consumers are more concerned about the environmental impact of poultry production as well as animal welfare drawing on an international range of expertise this book reviews research on safety quality and sustainability issues in poultry production part 1 discusses risks from pathogens detection and safety management on farms and in slaughterhouse operations part 2 looks at ways of enhancing the flavour colour texture and nutritional quality of poultry meat finally the book reviews the environmental impact of poultry production achieving sustainable production of poultry meat volume 1 safety quality
